Both economic groups such as business groups, labor unions, the farmers and professional groups and non-economic groups like single and public interest groups, ethnic and idealistic groups or the intergovernmental lobby play an essential role in the political process. For instance, lobbying organizations play an essential role for the candidates in their election campaigns. They contribute a potential source of financial support. In order to persuade the candidates of representing their particular interest, they distribute huge amounts of money to their chosen candidate or party. This paper approaches the historical development of lobbying in the history of the United States and investigates how its deep embedding into American politics was made possible. Making this more clearly, the evolvements is divided into four main eras: The historical roots of the development of interest groups; conditions and tendencies leading to plurality; the early 20th century: The first era of organization and the 1960's and 70's: The rise of initiatives and interest groups. Explaining their development, it is on the one hand essential to note down the basic conditions that served as a fundament and helped to create a unique...
